

A Short Intermission

WOW! This show is definitely number two on my list! The audience reaction each show gets better and better! We had 124 in the audience for a Sunday matinee which is tremendous! The boos get better and better each time! "We love to hate your Potter!"

After the curtain, we had our cast photo taken then we had to make room for another school concert tomorrow night by moving the sets and props backstage. We also had to take the steps leading from the stage into the house. Poor "Clearance" missed the low ceiling sign and whacked himself on the lip of the stage. OUCH!

I also learned of next season's attraction. It starts in March with Curious Savage. I told Dawn (who is directing and has been involved with each of the three shows I have been in this year) that I would love to try out but it conflicts with my nephew's Confirmation... sorry, Dawn.

Just in time for Halloween, the Village Players are presenting the immortal Hound of the Baskervilles. Perhaps we can encourage another Holmes fan to audition for that... hint, hint. I know I am anxiously awaiting that one!

Finally, the TENTATIVE Holiday production will be Babes in Toyland. That would be a LOT of fun.

So... lots coming up. But first... the second week of It's A Wonderful Life. Still not too late to check out the final three shows. Thanks again to the fantastic cast, crew, and director and the fabulous audiences!
