

Fatal Error Has Been Fixed

Thank goodness. I would hate to think that one of our annual April the 1st glitches actually stuck! I love April Fools Day! I got the three co-workers today. I got the boss although she promised that I would need to find another place of employment if I had.

Because I had to work this morning, I recorded The Price is Right. Not something I usually do but since inheriting the microphone, Drew has had brilliant shows on April first and today was no exception. Last year, "Mimi" served as a model on the show. This year, she was the new "Executive Producer" and promised to keep an eye on the host to see if he made any mistakes. She was very helpful in particular with his trouble with names.

A few of the games were hysterical: In Plinko Pat had to determine the correct number for a Snuggie (sorry, not $50+), a Club (one of those anti-auto-theft devices), a chia pet, and (what else) THE CLAPPER! She only missed on the snuggie and ended up winning $11,000.

Pick-a-Pair saw Pat needing to pick the two grocery items that were priced exactly the same. Halloween ready to bake cookies, Christmas Ziploc containers, St. Pat's Day garland, Valentine conversation hearts, New Years party poppers, and Count Chocula.

And finally, the showcase saw Pat and Pat going for two fabulous showcases. And not to spoil the surprise, but... PAT WON! Of course, they both could have gone over.
